The heroine had been several days. of a lady with black hair and eyes, moddays. The heroine had been a resident of Livingston for some time and numbered among her admirers all the eligible bachelors in the town. Some time ago she made the acquaintance of a prominent county judge; the acquaintance had ripened into friendship, and as late events have proved, even into something more on the proved, even into something more on the part of the judge. Several days ago an old time friend of the judge, from California, Wilkinson by name, stopped in Livingston with the intention of visiting the park, and of course visited daily at the office of the judge. It was during one of these visits that he was introduced to Miss Jennie, who had called markly to become a markly to be the course of the judge. merely to borrow a magazine of the judge, which she read regularly, you know. In just what manner the friendship Wilkinson and Miss Jennie mutually formed for each other took such rapid strides the judge has never been able to find out. He was told, will marry as soon as they get there. The judge, however, misses Jennie's company to a remarkable degree, and don't deny her. He says it was his friend, and a man even older than himself, who betrayed his confidence. Wilkinson, however, is happy, and said he didn't care what Miss Jennie's past history might be.

The late Drs. Gage and Burton, of Hartford, were both genial and fun-loving clergymen, and when the two met there was always a delightful passage of wit, as the following anecdotes illustrate: One of attractive than the others, and on its second repetition it had become a "chestnut" and did not "draw;" many left. When Dr. Gage was relating to Dr. Burton his experience with a burglar, he said: "Why, doctor, I had him down flat on his back—I held him there—he couldn't move an inch!" "What a splendid opportunity," retorted Dr. Burton "that was Gage to have delice. Dr. Burton, "that was, Gage, to have delivered to him your lecture on Palestine."
